Indiana man takes restored Jeeps to D-Day events

By WALTER SCHROTH
Special to the Gazette

White Township businessman Walter Schroth has been in the middle of the D-Day 75th anniversary observances in France, where he traveled early last week, with one of his collections of World War II era jeeps available for the occasion.

ported in one of his earliest messages. "We are actually in Portsmouth about a block from where President Trump will be speaking this coming week."

Stewart flew out of while he was in England. They have a restaurant on the field called Stewart's Café. It has a large picture of him from the part of an military.

"More later, got to go to a doctors meeting," Schroth closed, by accident of the whirlwind of activity in the days leading up to the event.

This is the local news you get if you don't purchase a subscription.
